8/21-25 BIG SUR & HEARST CASTLE

This is easily the most deserted and probably the prettiest stretch of coastline in northern California. That is probably why William Hearst built his residence here. This stretch of coast has everything from redwoods to amazing bridges, winding roads and scenic overlooks. Northern California is an entirely different climate from the arid southern end of the state. Here it is cool and moist enough to remain green and forested providing enough sunlight and moisture for the remarkable sequoia redwood forests. This stretch of Highway 1 does not have the beach access that the southern half does but it surley has better ocean views, better windy cliffside roads and overlooks, and lots of river canyons requiring landmark bridges like Bixby Creek Bridge. There is lots of hiking here as well mostly short afternoon hikes or coastal access trails providing access to barefoot beach walks. On the southern end of this stretch of coastline is the Hearst Castle, once the most opulent architectural structure in California designed by one of the first woman architects Julia Morgan in an otherwise male dominated profession at the time. The property and adjacent zoo has been turned into a visitor attraction and is a truly remarkable example of period architecture with its pools gardens grounds and zoo. If you have not visited northern California before this will provide a tour de force of its forests and coastline. Lodging is California expensive here but there are camping options, let me know if you are interested in this economy. Provided: airfare, lodging, rental car. Dates 8/21-25 Cost $1,332
