8/11 COOPER LAKE CANOE

We have skied in this area on occasion in the past couple of years, and those who have been on those trips will recall the serenity of the area. If you got down to the bridge and looked up the lake to the ridge line that memory will have stuck in your mind. The lake is located in the heart of the Cascade Mountains and almost touches the Cascade Crest Trail. The dominant summits along this dividing line here are almost too numerous to mention, and include such monoliths as Island Mt looming immediately beyond the west shore of the lake. Then there is Chikamin, Four Brothers, Lemah Mountain, Chimney Rock, Overcoat Peak, Summit Chief and others. This last isolated summit I had the opportunity to climb many years ago and it entailed a somewhat long and convoluted approach. This is a pretty tame afternoon of canoeing in a stunningly beautiful valley. The lake is less than two miles long and about a half mile wide at its widest so the water should not be very rough even if we have a windy day. Do bring your binoculars and camera as it is quite likely that the boats will allow us the opportunity to sneak up on some of the wildlife in this area while they are unaware of our presence. Binoculars from a boat also provide a wide landscape for bird watching without the usual forest canopy obstructed view. Remember sunscreen for this trip as there will be sun from above, and reflection from the water. We will talk about proper canoe and kayak paddle strokes on this leisurely trip for those who are interested to learn. Provided: transit, maps. Date 8/11 Cost $62
