2/6-11 JUNEAU FORESTS & GLACIERS

Juneau was originally a gold rush city, actually named after one of its early prospectors Joe Juneau. This area was originally inhabited by the Tlingit First Nations people. The Tlingit “people of the tides” were an artistic people which interestingly believed in a matrilineal kinship system. So offspring belonged to the mother’s clan. This is the capitol city of the State of Alaska but its population is only one tenth that of Anchorage so it has a small town feel. This coastal town is the primary port of call for Glacier Bay tours, which can be done in a day from town. The closest ocean calving glacier is just north of town, and accessible by city bus. The Mendenhall Glacier visitor center is here with many hikes and view points and whale sightings are common. The numerous other attractions in town include the hatchery and aquarium, the mining museum, and the city historical and cultural museum. For the first time visitor is also the Mt. Roberts Tramway which lifts you 2,000’ above this fjord town for beautiful vistas of the Tongass National Rainforest and southeastern Alaska. Now this being Alaska there is also the extraordinary popularity of Nordic skiing. Perhaps this is because of the long snowy winters when running shoes and bicycles just don’t cut it for exercise, or perhaps Alaska is just our continent's Norway. Whatever it is there are ski opportunities everywhere. There are a dozen ski trails near town ranging from skate groomed in city parks, to ungroomed tours into the Tongass Rainforest. We might even find some skiing to be done on the Mendenhall, or perhaps set up a dog sled ride on the massive glacier. Provided: transit, airfare, lodging. Dates 2/6-11 Cost $988
