1/28-29 LIBERTY & WILLIAMS CREEK

A couple years ago we tried to do an early season day trip to this area but there was not enough early season snow for the valley to really come into its own for Nordic skiing. On this economical two day trip we will be going back in explore in mid winter. In the past we have skied north of here at Iron Creek and Old Blewett Pass, with its numerous routes and beautiful eastern Washington character. West of here is Red Mountain and the fire lookout east of the Teanaway River valley. We have also done trips east of here to the Garrison Springs area recently as day trips, but many years ago there was a cluster of cabins which we stayed at and enjoyed some of the best wood stove prepared vegetarian cooking I have had anywhere. For some reason we have never had the opportunity to explore this large area in between all of these other fabulous destinations. This region has three different ski loops depending on snow level and energy reserves! There are multiple ridge line ski routes which would offer views of Table Mountain, Red Mountain and the Blewett Pass region. There are also tie ins to the ski routes to the north and east which have been such great destinations for us in the past. So this is an exploratory trip to a new area relatively close to home. In 1974 the "living ghost town" of Liberty was added to the National Register of Historic Places, and there are still many old buildings still left leaning against trees or teetering in place. Come with us and help explore this historic mining region for future ski and hiking opportunities. Provided: transit, lodging, maps. Date 1/28 Cost $177
