3/20-27 QUEBEC AND LABRADOR

This area is about as far northeast as you can go on the North American continent and not hit pack ice, and they take their cross country skiing seriously here. There are hundreds of Nordic ski centers in Quebec including many of the top ranked in all of Canada. The Mont Saint Anne was considered the largest in Canada but is now probably the largest contiguous track system in North America, now that California's Royal Gorge has contracted. The system boasts 208 kilometers of classic trails, 125 kilometers of which can be skate skied. The area receives 400 centimeters of snow a year. Gatineau Park, just outside of Ottawa, presents an outstanding array of Nordic trails also with 185 kilometers in total of which 100 kilometers are groomed. There are 10 warming huts, some of which are absolutely beautiful, and a destination in themselves. The ski season is long and the apres-skiing in nearby Wakefield and Chelsea is excellent. Then there is the Lurentians, famous for their network of cross country ski trails. Choose from over 1000 kilometers of trails in 30 locations. A few of the more popular trails include the ones at Mont Tremblant, Parc d'Oka, the trails around Val-David and P'tit Train du Nord. This is of course the French speaking corner of Canada so it may feel just like our fabulous trip to the Jura plateau in eastern France. Then it is off to Newfoundland and Labrador for a whole other array of coastal touring centers. The Blow Me Down Ski Club :-) has 42 kilometers of trails, crossing through some of Newfoundland's most beautiful country. Trails for all levels are kept groomed and track set, and for the adventurous back-country skier there is superlative skiing to be found in Gros Morne National Park as well. If the skiing isn't enough there is all the French and Northern culture to enjoy in this very unique and welcoming area. Several years ago we took a trip to the far northeastern US and made memories that will last a lifetime, this area should be even more of a wonder in winter white.
